In a multicomponent biotechnological process, a fermentation broth containing atorvastatin acid is extracted with a solvent to obtain a mixture of extract and side products which is then purified. The extract is acidified in the form of a viscous oil which is converted by trans-esterification with trifluoromethane or with pentafluoroethane into a mixture of atorvastatin free base and of atorvastatin lactone. Atorvastatin free base is then separated from the mixture of atorvastatin lactone and of atorvastatin free base by crystallization. Atorvastatin lactone is obtained. The new process makes it possible, in particular, to recover atorvastatin acid in a high degree of purity and in a form which is suitable for subsequent final formulation into pharmaceutical forms. It is known to the person skilled in the art that the extraction of atorvastatin acid is carried out with a solvent which is miscible with water. It is also known to the person skilled in the art that the extraction of atorvastatin acid with an acidified n-butanol solution or a phosphate buffer solution makes it possible to obtain a mixture of atorvastatin lactone and of atorvastatin free base which is subjected to crystallization in a ratio of 1:1. The process according to the invention makes it possible to produce atorvastatin free base in a very pure form. Processes are also known for the purification of atorvastatin free base from the mixture of atorvastatin lactone and of atorvastatin free base. U.S. Pat. No. 6,562,978 describes a process for the purification of a compound of the formula: in which X represents a leaving group such as, for example, a hal
