IKE and MD5 to see how I can use the various parts of what it has to offer in a cheap and dependable way. I can't understand some of the theory behind this and was wondering if anyone could understand what it is I'm trying to achieve? I have 3 servers, one of which will contain a users pre shared keys, A second will be used to generate the keys that I will be transmitting over to the user (with authentication), and the third will be used to authenticate the users key. The problem I have is that I would like the two last servers to be able to communicate directly with each other. I have found that I could make use of MD5 hashes in the exchanged keys, and SHA1 hashes to authenticate those keys. But I'm unsure on how to generate the IKE negotiation keys, I'm unsure if IKE or IPsec should be used, and I'm unsure how to use IKE to do this. I've also found a link to a great site that lists how to use PEAP to set up the keys with MD5 hashing, and SHA1 hashing. But my question is, does this apply to IKE as well? Can anyone make my confusion clear? A: In your sample you say you want to use "shooting two birds with one stone". Which version of IKE are you using? I'll start with IPSEC
